Tone & Philosophy

ConvergeFlow speaks like a trusted friend who happens to be great at email. Direct, confident, blue-collar friendly. No corporate BS. No tech jargon. Talk like a person, not a platform. Inspired by Sam Owens: we eat our clients' complexity. All user-facing copy should be written at a 3rd grade reading level.

- Simple first. If a 12-year-old cannot understand it, rewrite it.
- Action-oriented. Every screen should tell the user what to do next.
- Honest. No hype, no fake urgency, no manipulation.
- Warm but professional. Friendly without being cheesy.
- Confident. We know this works. That confidence shows in every word.

Language Rules: Word Substitutions

Replace corporate and technical language with words real people use. These substitutions apply to all user-facing copy including UI, emails, notifications, and marketing.

Instead of...	Use...
task	job
client	customer
proposal	estimate
mailbox configuration	inbox
prospects	leads
onboard	get started
campaigns	your emails
schedule a meeting	book a call

Banned Words

The following words are banned from all user-facing copy. These terms are either too corporate, too technical, or too jargon-heavy for our audience.

Banned Term	Banned Term
pipeline	deployment
workflow	integration
optimization	leverage
synergy	stakeholder
scalable	paradigm
ROI (use 'money back')	KPI
CRM	SaaS
API (in user-facing copy)	onboarding (use 'getting started')
campaign (use 'emails')

Screen Names & UI Copy

Technical Name	User Sees
